The Phobia Quiz Book

by

Dedication

To Robin, who screams, jumps and runs at the sight of a spider
no bigger than the size of a dime.
And, who on the other hand,
loves the sight and feel of a snake of any size.
Preface

I am a professor of psychology specializing in abnormal psychology. Additionally, I am a practicing psychotherapist. Over the years I realized the most frequently asked questions about psychiatric illness focused on anxiety. Specifically, anxiety associated with phobias. Practically everyone is afraid of something or someone. Whether it is spiders, bridges, schools, doctors, etc., most people seem to have one or more fears which impact their lives on some level. It was that realization that brought me to write The Phobia Quiz Book.

When I arrived at the notion of introducing the The Phobia Quiz Book to the public I immediately had a dilemma; how could I educate about the various phobias in a fun and entertaining manner. This would be a problem. Make no mistake, there is nothing funny about being phobic. For many, phobias can be debilitating and life threatening. So, it is not my goal to make fun of anyone with a phobia. Rather, I want to introduce you to all of the phobias of which the psychiatric community is aware. Additionally, you will learn the fear associated with the specific phobia. To accomplish this I have provided you with a straightforward three question test on each page to see if you can guess the condition associated with the phobia. Here is what you can do.

Simply turn to any page in the book. Read the name of the phobia on the page. Some of them can be a little difficult to pronounce. Take the time to learn to pronounce them properly. Once you have mastered the enunciation of the phobia presented on the page, read the three possible answers. Select one of the answers by putting a check mark in the box provided next to the answer. After selecting an answer you can either go to the next phobia or read the correct answer on the back of each page. When you have completed the book, count your correct answers. There is no score. You can decide your own proficiency based on a total of 275 phobia questions.

Working through the The Phobia Quiz Book you will find that whether you do this on your own or with a group of friends, you will learn more about the types of phobias that exist than you could ever have imagined. And who knows, in the process of leaning the phobias you may come to the conclusion that you have one or two or... phobias yourself.

Introduction

It is safe to say that most people are afraid of something. In the discipline of psychiatry and psychology these fears are referred to as anxieties. In fact, there is a separate psychiatric category for anxieties known quite simply as, Anxiety Disorders. So, what is an anxiety disorder?

An Anxiety Disorder is an uncomfortable or unpleasant emotion brought about by the anticipation or feeling that an event--a future event or memory from the past--will cause intense fear. These feelings, past, present or future create a reaction in the mind that is often transferred to the rest of the body causing a physical reaction. These reactions may be present in the form of ruminations-- thinking and dwelling on the fear--sweating, shaking, sleeplessness, inability to eat, overeating, drug taking behavior, alcohol consumption, choking, increased heart rate, shortness of breath, to name a few. All of the aforementioned have a single feeling in common; irrational fear. These fears affect people of all ages, ethnicity and social backgrounds; the fears are socially indiscriminate and usually begin in childhood.

There are several types of Anxiety Disorders. The Diagnostic and Statical Manual of Mental Disorders, four edition identifies four types of Anxiety Disorders. These types are:

Panic disorder without agoraphobia. These individuals suffer from panic attacks and worries but, agoraphobia is not present. (Agoraphobia is having anxieties about situations and places from which the individual experiencing these feelings believes they can not escape.)

Panic disorder with agoraphobia. These individuals suffer from panic attacks and worries with agoraphobia. As a result individuals will do whatever they can to avoid those places and situations that may lead to confinement. For example: elevators, rooms with no widows and tight hallways.

Social phobias. These individuals fear social situations. Additionally, they will avoid any situation which commands that they preform or give a presentation including eating and speaking in public.

Specific phobias. These individuals suffer from a fear of exposure to a particular object or situation. These objects and situations are as varied as there are objects and situations. They include, but are certainly not limited to a dread of hair, dogs, bugs, tunnels, pregnancy, sex, etc. Whatever the mind can imagine the mind can therefore feel fear.

At the time of the writing of the Phobia Quiz Book there are 274 documented phobias. It is this last area, Specific phobias, that the Phobia Quiz Book focuses its attention.
The scientific community still does not know or understand the origin and cause of a phobia. However, there is some belief that a phobia may have a genetic link. For instance, when the question is asked of the individual: “Why are you afraid of blood?” The answer is most often: “I don’t know. I just am terrified each time I see or think about blood.” It is estimated that 6.3 million adult Americans suffer from specific phobias. Approximately twice as many women as men suffer from this disorder. Remember, while most people are afraid of something, it is only when the fear becomes all consuming, causing emotional and physical reactions, that the individual actually receives the diagnosis of a Specific Phobia.

Treatment is available in two forms: Psychotherapy and psychopharmacology. Using the psychotherapy model the individual is encouraged to discuss, over time, their particular fear or fears. Some therapists may use what is known as exposure therapy, sometimes known as, flooding. Here the individual is put in ever increasing proximity to the object or situation causing the fear. For instance, a therapist may ask a patient to drive to a section of town that contains a bridge and ask the patient to stop and discuss his or her fears. The next time the therapist will ask the patient to drive to the foot of the bridge. Gradually, the patient is put to greater exposure and increased anxiety of their phobic response. In the end, the individual may come to accept their irrational reaction causing a diminishing and ultimate release of the crippling fear.

Psychopharmacology uses pharmaceutical medications to intervene in the system to help the individual cope with the problem. Some of these medications are fluoxetine, sertraline, fluvoxamine, paroxetine and citalopram, to name a few. Tricyclics are also among the medications used in treating phobias. It almost goes without saying that both psychotherapeutic and psychopharmacological interventions should only be used under the strict supervision of a professional whose practice focuses, in part, on the treatment of phobias.

Of course one way to deal with a phobia is to avoid the situation or object that causes the severe anxiety reaction. This is possible if your fear relates to something easily avoidable such as hot air balloons; simply don’t be around the balloons. Solutions such as the aforementioned are far more difficult when it involves situations and objects the individual needs to get through life. Examples of these are paint, elevators, spiders, etc. These and more are all part of the human existence on the planet earth. Therefore, treatment and intervention may be necessary.

As you thumb through the The Phobia Quiz Book you will undoubtedly become aware of your own psychological triggers. If in the process you realize that you may suffer from one or more of the phobias you will then need to consider whether or not you need to seek treatment. Additionally, while on the journey you may realize that a relative or friend suffers from a phobia. If this is the case reach out and support them in seeking help. Never tease or taunt someone who is phobic. This behavior simply prolongs the fear, often times making it worse. Remember, phobias interrupt a better quality of life. And isn’t a better quality of life what we all seek?
